MVCTC Agriculture Student, Rendy Rowley, Receives Outstanding Student Award

Springfield, Ohio – Miami Valley Career Technology Center (MVCTC) Agri-Technology student, Rendy Rowley (New Lebanon), received the Clark State Tech Prep Outstanding Student Award for 2010 at the Clark State Senior Recognition Ceremony. Rendy, the daughter of Bruce and Linda Rowley of New Lebanon, plans to attend Clark State Community College in the fall to pursue a dual major in Ag Business and Ag Mechanics.

Mr. Bill Hershberger, Agri-Technology instructor at MVCTC, said of Rendy's success, "Rendy was chosen because of her hard work and commitment to preparation for a career in Agriculture Business".

Students in the MVCTC COSA Ag Resources Management program learn the latest agriculture technology including a global positioning system to manage data in business decisions – the first used by any Ohio school. Students study business management, financial planning, livestock care, plant and soil management, machine operation and maintenance, conservation, leadership skills, business software, livestock production and marketing. Students in COSA also participate in FFA, one of the largest student organizations in the United States. Students attending MVCTC in the COSA Ag Resources Management program may be eligible for college credit and scholarship money toward Clark State Community College upon successfully completing the program.
